Polish-Czech Visit A Non-Event

Polish Premier Jaroszewicz returned to Warsaw yesterday following a two-day visit to Czechoslovakia at the invitation of Premier Strougal. The two men signed a protocol on the outcome of their talks, which were described as "very fruitful, cordial and friendly," and issued a joint communique on Jaroszewicz's departure. Extension of bilateral economic ties and developing views on the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe were among the many topics of mutual interest discussed.

One topic not mentioned in the communique but which probably was also discussed at some length is the progress of Czech-West German negotiations to establish diplomatic relations. The Poles had hoped to proceed rapidly in establishing diplomatic ties with West Germany following the June ratification of the Polish-West German treaty. Apparently, however, they have been told not to make a move until the Czechs are finished; now they are impatiently waiting and presumably are anxious to see how the Czechs fare. It is also probable that they discussed the recent trials in Czechoslovakia, and Jaroszewicz assured Strougal of Warsaw's continued support and sympathy.

Rolovic Assassins Escape From Swedish Jail

The two Croatian terrorists serving life terms for assassinating Yugoslav Ambassador Rolovic in Stockholm in April 1971, have escaped from a Swedish maximum security prison. They were part of a 15-man jail break. According to an AP story, the prisoners used keys to pass through several jail blocks without triggering the alarm system and then climbed a wall using ladders made from prison shop and gym equipment. (the equipment is part of Sweden's effort to humanize its prison system).

Anti-emigre emotions are already running high in Yugoslavia following the Ustashi attack in Bosnia-Herzegovina last month. This escape will only intensify these feeling by reviving memories of the Rolovic incident and will strain Yugoslavia's relations with Sweden should Stockholm fail to find the escapees and return them to jail.

JAT is Ready When You Are

A Yugoslav travel agency in Belgrade has begun to offer a three week tour to China and visit in Moscow, for $1,150. Included in trip are stops in Peking, Shanghai, Nanking, as well as at the Great Wall and other unspecified Chinese landmarks. The tour is apparently an outgrowth of the recent civil air agreement to begin service between the two countries.
